GAS MAY STAY UP

Senate Likely to Kill Ninety-cent Measure.

ATTITUDE ALREADY SHOWN

House Doubtless Will Pass Bill Reported from District Committee. Measure is Effective January 1, 1909—Child Labor Bill Favored. Other District Measures Reported.

While there isn't much question as to what the House will do with the Cary bill providing for 90-cent gas, in the District in 1909, the Senate furnishes much more of a problem, or, perhaps, after all, no problem at all.

Since the Senate District Committee has already killed one provision—that in the District appropriation bill—which would have lowered the price of gas, it is not a hard matter to believe that it will again go upon record as opposing anything which will cut down the gas monopoly's revenues.

This seems even more probable since in the first instance the gas company would have suffered only as to its revenues acquired directly from the District government. This later bill—the one reported yesterday from the House Committee on the District of Columbia—provides that the price to all consumers shall be but 90 cents after January 1, 1909.

May Have Known It. Of course it is possible that the Senate committee knew all the time that a measure which would affect the price of gas to rich and poor, the government and the people, would come out of the House, and no doubt it eagerly awaited such a bill, preferring to east aside a fragmentary act affecting only the government, in view of the fact that later they hoped to lower the price to all alike, perhaps.

The bill reported yesterday to the House by the District Committee is practically the same as when introduced. Two amendments were made; one providing that the rate be 90 cents per thousand instead of 80, as originally proposed, and the other providing that the bill become effective, if passed, on January 1, 1909, instead of May 1, 1908.

The new price of gas, if it does become the new price, will lower the rate of the Washington Gaslight Company 10 cents per thousand feet, while it will lower the rate of the Georgetown company 25 cents per thousand feet. If the bill reported favorably Wednesday preventing inflation of stock of the two companies is passed by Congress, dividends should accrue just as easily as in the past, even with a much greater reduction in price.

Reports Other Bills. The House District Committee reported in addition to the gas-reduction measure a bill by Representative Smith providing for the prevention of child labor in the District; a bill by Representative Taylor, providing for the regulation of employment agencies; the bill of Representative Hay, permitting the Washington, Alexandria and Mount Vernon Railway Company to use overhead wires on its Washington approach to the new Highway Bridge over the Potomac, instead of conduits.

Mr. Smith's bill to amend the District code in reference to the registration of deaths and the disposition of bodies was reported adversely. The committee will have the next prohibition hearing April 23. Several members of Congress will argue against the Sims prohibition bill.

FORGERY THE CHARGE

Witness in Land Fraud Case Denies Signature.

OREGON SENATOR ON STAND

C. W. Hodson, Notary Public, Says He Never Saw Warranty Deeds Bearing His Seal and Name—Papers Constituted Alleged Crookedness in Transfer of Public Lands.

State Senator C. W. Hodson, of Portland, Oreg., was the government's chief witness yesterday in the trial of Frederick A. Hyde, John A. Benson, Henry P. Dimond, and Joost H. Schneider on the indictment which charges them with defrauding the government out of land in California and Oregon.

Mr. Hodson, who is a notary public, was shown several applications for land and several warranty deeds which bore his notarial seal and signature. After examining them carefully, he pronounced his name on the papers a forgery, and said that he had never executed the papers, had not affixed his seal, and did not know the parties whose signatures were attested.

Never Saw Application. In fact, he said, he had never seen the applications and deeds until they were shown to him in the courtroom. Mr. Hodson is considered an important witness by the government, as his testimony is expected to bear out its contention that many of the applications for school land in California and Oregon bore the signatures of persons who were not in existence. It is also the government's contention that when these applications were approved and the land made available, it would then be assigned to Hyde and Benson by deeds and other papers improperly executed. Justice Stafford yesterday ruled that a confession made by Joost H. Schneider to Special Agent Hollinger was admissible as evidence against him, and would be admitted, but that it could not be used against any of the other defendants. This confession will be placed in evidence later.

Barnes Kept Off Stand.

Upon objection made by the defense, J. J. Barnes, formerly a clerk in the General Land Office and who was dismissed at the same time with Woodford D. Harlan and William A. Valt, the latter two for having accepted money from Benson, was not allowed to testify. The government tried to show that Hyde was engaged in fraudulent transactions before the General Land Office previous to the time covered by the indictment. A series of letters written by Hyde to Barnes were read. These showed that through Barnes, Hyde kept in close touch with what was going on in the Land Office.

Barnes was not allowed to testify on the ground that his testimony was not relevant to the present indictment.
